You can buy and sell products under a trademark, but not buy and sell products branded with a brand name (MOTOROLA is a brand name, PR400 is a brand name, and both are trademarks). The specific trademark you're looking for is "PR400". It's listed in their Frequently Asked Questions, and in their CE database. You cannot buy it, but it can be downloaded. You can also download PR38, a low-end product that uses the same chipset as the PR400, for your radio. PS: Motorola is a trademark of Motorola Mobility, Inc. Some of the company's most high-profile assets include smartphones like the Droid line, the Atrix line, and the more recent Moto X and Moto G series. Motorola has also contributed to a whole slew of products, ranging from calculators to microwave ovens to cable modems.
